"Technical Support for Grassroots Public Interest Groups"

July 10, 2026

Leadership Update

The Center for Science in Public Participation is pleased to welcome Dr. Sara K. Phillips as Executive Director.

Dr. Phillips brings more than 15 years of experience in mining governance, environmental law, human rights, and community engagement, with a focus on strengthening inclusive approaches to mineral resource development and supporting communities affected by mining.

As Executive Director, Dr. Phillips will oversee CSP2's organizational strategy, partnerships, institutional development, and public interest work. She will work alongside CSP2 Founder and Chief Scientist, Dr. David Chambers and CSP2 staff to build on the organization's long-standing reputation for independent technical assistance, credible research, and public participation support.

This leadership transition comes as CSP2 prepares for its next phase of programmatic expansion to support communities, public interest groups, and Indigenous Nations affected by mining.

A broader website refresh is underway. Stay tuned for additional updates.
